ALVAH D. MEYER, EDITOR. PHONE 471

THE POINT OF VIEWBy Bertram Bradley.

Somebody else might not see you as I do.

Somebody else might consider you plain.

Somebody else might be asking me, "Why do?

Other girls seem to you silly and vain?"

I couldn't say, but I love you; and therefore

When you are near, why the heart in me melts,

So that I know that I really can't care for

Somebody else.

Somebody else might be fairer than you are.

I am conceding that somebody might, only I knew that the girls whom I view are

None of them one-half so pretty or bright;

Maybe your beauty won't bring you renown for

Capturing victims and taking their belts,

Yet I am fearful you might turn me down for

Somebody else!

Somebody else might be hanging around you—

Not if I know it, however, my dear,

I'm a bit jealous since that day I found you...

Somebody else better keep pretty clear,

Otherwise—well, kid, I've got a left hook like

Dempsey's, at times; I can swing some mean belts,

Somebody else, if he meets me, will look like

Somebody else!

IF YOU ARE WELL BRED

You know that wedding invitations are always issued by the bride's parents from two weeks to a month before the day set for the wedding.

If the bride is an orphan there are sent out in the name of her nearest relative. If there is an older brother they may be issued in his name, but never in the name of a sister, unless she is much older than the bride, or unless she is a married woman.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

The use of the wedding veil was unknown in olden times. Instead, the four most intimate friends of the bride held over her and the bridegroom a canopy of red fabric.

Later these canopies were made of lace or fine linen, beautifully embroidered.

The bridal veil of today is an outgrowth of this old custom.

GUILD MEMBERS TO SPEND WEDNESDAY VISITING

The Central Guild of the Central Presbyterian Church will not hold its regular meeting this week, but instead, on Wednesday afternoon, all members are asked to visit the sick, shut-ins and strangers in the city.
